Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

JOHN W. OVERALL A BUSINESS MAN

Something About The Nominee of the Republicans for Governor of Tennessee.

RESPECTED BY DEMOCRATS

One of the Most Successful Farmers and Live Stock Breeders in the State and a Man of Large Affairs—His Plan of Campaign.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 28.—John Overall, Republican nominee for Governor of Tennessee, has met and measured life with men from the farm, the shop and the field, from the store to the desks of bank presidents, and proven to be their peer, winning always their esteem and confidence, making friends by his honesty and broadness, even of political opponents, until not a Democrat in Tennessee has anything but respect for him. He has worked from the ground up, and he knows men from the ground up, with that sympathy which comes from the struggles and trials of life and that finds the red clay strata of honesty in all men.

That is why John Overall loves his common fellowman, and why today, on his many acres of land, accumulated by his own toil and integrity, there are scores of tenants who love him with filial devotion. There are workmen who have lived with him from twenty to thirty years, and there has never been a man who worked for him but has received more than he bargained for.

One of the largest farmers in Tennessee, one of the most extensive breeders of stock of all kind, owner of pikes, the president of banks, prosperity has not spoiled the innate kindness in his soul. Wealth and honors have not spoiled him. Holding a high political office for over seventeen years under three Republican Presidents and one Democratic President, he so won their esteem and confidence that when his time had expired and his resignation was forwarded to a Democratic President, even that President retained him in office for over a year beyond his allotted time.

John W. Overall was born at Liberty, in DeKalb County, in 1855. The family was impoverished by the war which came on a few years after, and with five young sisters to support, there was much work and little play for the boy whose ambition to worthily represent the family name evidenced itself very early in his attention to many duties. But the boy's desire to a man of education and worth in the world, and whenever he could be spared from the work of the farm he attended the little district school, and there are those among the companions of his early days who have not forgotten his perseverance and industry. But money was scarce, and his labor was needed, and it was not until he was twenty-eight years old that he seriously undertook the acquirement of an education; then he studied for two years before entering Cumberland University at Lebanon, Tenn.

Law was his choice of a profession, and on being admitted to the bar he opened an office at Smithville, Tenn., where his prospects for success were splendid. But he was compelled to abandon the practice on account of bad health, and decided to devote his time to farming and other outdoor life. In 1881 he was elected Superintendent of Public Instruction of DeKalb County, serving four years in that position. He has been a delegate to several of the national conventions of his party, and for years has been regarded as one of its leaders in the state. In 1898 he was appointed United States Marshal for the Middle District of Tennessee, and served seventeen years in that position.

His record in the administration of the affairs of that office is well known to Tennesseans. During his time as Marshal his office handled many hundred thousands of dollars, and government audits of his books always found them correct, and every cent accounted for. His conduct of the office was such as to win for him the commendation of all, regardless of party.

Mr. Overall's reputation as a successful business man is known all over the state, and throughout his public career it has been his intelligent grasp of affairs as a business man that has enabled him to weigh men and methods with the foresight and acumen developed by years of business training. He is president of a bank in Liberty, Tenn., is president of the Lebanon & Sparta Turnpike Co., and is a stockholder and director in other banks and business enterprises in Nashville and other parts of the state.

If elected Governor of Tennessee, his business training would insure a safe, economical, successful administration of the affairs of the state. The government of the State of Tennessee is simply a big co-operative enterprise in which all the people are stockholders, who elect their business manager, or governor, every two years. If John Overall is elected, the people will be sure of a safe and sane administration.

John Overall's people have always been southerners, and his wife is a southern woman, who was Miss Mary Oliver, the daughter of Luther Oliver, a brave Confederate soldier who was killed in battle. Her uncles were Confederate soldiers, as were the uncles of her husband. She is one of the most active members of the Daughters of the Confederacy.

This is the man the Republicans have nominated for Governor—a Southerner, true to the traditions and history of his native land. A Tennessean of the same blood and spirit as the pioneers of old—Robertson, Jackson, Crockett and Sevier. His ancestors were among the first settlers of the state. He loves his state, glories in her achievements, and will exert every fiber of his heart and brain to uphold her and to carry her to yet greater heights of honor and integrity. He is a business man who has handled successfully his own business affairs, and will therefore know how to handle successfully the business of Tennessee.

Mr. Overall has made the following statement in regard to his plan of campaign:

"My general plan of campaign will be somewhat different from the usual Tennessee campaign. I am not a spell-binder, but just a plain business man and farmer. Speech-making is not in my line. I have seen some mighty good men who could make speeches, and I have seen hundreds of the most capable business men who could not make a speech. And then I have seen a great many men who were decided successes as spell-binders who were totally unfit to hold public office.

"If I am elected Governor of Tennessee, I expect to give the people a business administration. My experience has been largely along business lines. The people who know my record as a business man can say whether or not they consider me capable of transacting the business of the Governor's office in an orderly, systematic, business-like manner.

"It will not be necessary for me to deliver an oration every time I perform an executive act. Do not understand, however, that I am not going to conduct a vigorous campaign, for it is my purpose to see as many people as possible and to reach tens of thousands more by the liberal use of printer's ink. My views on public questions will be freely and frankly expressed through the newspapers of the state and otherwise from time to time.

"Of course I will probably make some speeches, but no regular speaking campaign. The people want a business administration, and I believe they are entitled to it. If I should be elected Governor of Tennessee, I shall see to it that the institutions of the state and the various state departments are economically administered. It shall also be my highest aim and chief ambition to see the great resources of Tennessee developed, by our home people, if possible, and if not, by interesting and securing outside capital.

ORIGIN OF "PETRIFIED FOREST"

They Are Composed of an Extinct Species of Forest Tree.

The "Petrified Forest," of Arizona, really a series of petrified forests, lies a short distance south of Adamana, on the line of the Santa Fe railway. There are four "forests" included in a Government reservation called "Petrified Forest National Monument," created by presidential proclamation in 1906.

The name "forest" is not strictly appropriate, for the petrified tree trunks are all prostrate and are broken into sections. The logs are the remains of giant trees that grew in Triassic time, the age of reptiles. The trees were of several kinds, but most of them were related to the Norfolk Island pine, now used for indoor decoration.

Doubtless they grew in a near-by region and, after falling, drifted down a watercourse and lodged in some eddy or a sand bank. Later they were buried by sand and clay, finally to a depth of several thousand feet. The conversion to stone was effected by gradual replacement of the woody material by silica in the form called chalcedony, deposited by underground water. A small amount of iron oxides deposited at the same time has given the brilliant and beautiful brown, yellow and red tints which appear in much of the material.

Some of the tree trunks are 6 feet in diameter and more than 100 feet in length. In the first forest there is a fine trunk that forms a natural bridge over a small ravine, the water having first washed away the overlying clay and sand and then, following a crevice, worked out the channel underneath. The length of this log is 110 feet and the diameter 4 feet at the butt and 1 1/2 feet at the top.

The petrified woods are beautiful objects for study. When thin slices are carefully ground down to a thickness of 0.003 inch or less and placed under the microscope they show perfectly the original wood structure, all the cells being distinct, though now they are replaced by chalcedony.

By studying the sections F. H. Knowlton, of the United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, has found that most of these araucarian trees were of the species Araucarioxylon arizonicum, a tree now extinct.

It is known to have lived at the same geologic time also in the east-central part of the United States, where the remains of some of its associates have also been found. These included other cone-bearing trees, tree ferns, cycads and gigantic horsetails, which indicate that at that time, the rainfall was abundant.—U. S. Geological Survey.

A number of persons here are taking advantage of the cheap excursion rates to Nashville this week and besides bearing the next presidential speak, are taking in the Capitol City.

We've heaved a few more sighs of relief over here right recently. One was when we heard the Deutschland had safely landed back in Germany. Not that we care a continental for Kaiser Bill or any of the Hohenzollern family, but somehow we just naturally like to see one fellow outwit the other fellow. The other relief encircled us about the time it was announced that the contemplated strike of railroad employees had been deferred. Not that we cared a fig one way or other about the strike situation either. We just don't like to be inconvenienced. Do you savvy? We do rise to remark, however, that combinations of labor unions are as pernicious and detrimental to the spirit of our government and as much to be deprecated as organized capital. Do you get a fine on us there?
